Academic Calendar and Religious Holidays

- x CEPP continued its work to consider the current College policy around religious holiday observances. CEPP had been considering creating a more inclusive list of holidays on the academic calendar and thus a more comprehensive and inclusive acknowledgment of holidays. However, existing NY State law mentioned in the college catalog already recognized students' rights regarding religious freedom and legal protection for observances. Thus, CEPP, in collaboration with the Dean of Students, sought to clarify this policy and improve communication around this policy. CEPP drafted language for CC to consider for inclusion on faculty syllabi.
- x CEPP, prompted by the SGA representatives, was encouraged to consider of the date of the study day traditionally included in the fall calendar. Typicathye date was too late to be very vly svoTw [(

- clocks, etc.). This was brought to IPRO further consideration by the Space Planning Working Group (L. Greenholtz and D. Rodeckenmmittee CoChairs).
- CEPP was consulted informed by the Learning Experience ign & Digital Scholarship Support (LEDS) team regarding switchitoga new learning management software. Skidmore currently uses Blackboard and is exploring alternat (ives Brightspace)
- CEPP revisited recentiscussion of certificate programs. The fully director of assessment (P. von Allmen), explored the option, consulting with the registrar and institutional effectiveness team. Any certificate program would require NY State education application and approval, might require tracking employment deabf certificate holders. There would also
