Expressed Concerns

At different points throughout this process, varicos munity membersaised questions and complaints about the process/e will not specifically address or answer the specific concerns, but we record them here as part of the historical record.

Was the community given sufficient opportunity study and discussil the relevant matters?

Should the language in the Faculty Handbook be revised so as to require a "supermajority" (or 2/3) vote in the consideration of closing an academic program?

Was it appropriate for the VPAA to make the decision to not parameter UWW students while the program's future was under consideration?

Was it appropriate for the UWWWG Report to identify "a majority" of committee members as not supporting its own modelhen the group had not discussed the matter as a group?

Should language be added to the Faculty Handbook that can guide dercessiong-in other kinds of comparable circumstances?

Should the faculty express its view when the administration or Board is likely to make its own decision anyway?

COMMENTARY

Members of the Faculty Executive Committee believe that the process by which the UWW program was terminated was procedurally sound and conducted with integrity. The decision to close a program will always generate a high degree of disagreement, discondeditrust. This is why it is important to have in place sound and transparent procedures that allow all community members the opportunity deliberate onchallengeand fully discussuch a decision In consultation with relevant faculty committees, the indistration decided to follow the procedures in the faculty handbook for the termination of a department (Part One, Section XVII). Although the UWW program was in many ways very different from an academic department, the FEC believes that these procedwore well enough and that there is no reason to revise the Faculty Handbook in anticipation of other such scenarios.

Faculty committees were involved in the process every step of the wheeyCEPP, IPPC, and FEC were not only consulted but also pelaykey roles in bringing the proposal to the faculty
